"All right! You lost a couple of games! So what? Where's your spirit? Where's your loyalty — your will to win?"

"Fred used to watch the Brown Sox, but they've 'lost a couple of games' and he's disgusted with them!"

"Yes, it's my birthday, but I stopped having birthdays a couple of years ago!"

"So I stopped buying her birthday presents. Oh, brother! Did I get a cold reception!"

"Oh, good! Watts might. I wouldn't want a dog and take a night like this."

"Now that's ridiculous, Mother! You stay right there and George will walk down with an umbrella!"

"It just seems to me the city could do something! Harvey has been held up and robbed twice during the last month!"

"I know he'd opened and done three cards—as I gave him a pair. But I held one up and I looked it two dollars—!"

"Golf is a game! It's the fellowship and relaxation you get that count!"

"Well, that two-dollar George would give us the match that is two bucks up there that cost us!"

Howard is next to the building.

"Howard got a lot of questions for Howard. He's really interested in what we have to say about the war."

"The people, they are really interested in the war. They want to know what we think about it."

THE FUTURE

The authors of Disfranchisement have produced a book that will be as useful to the student of the history of the South as it is to the student of the history of the South. It is a book that will be read with interest and profit by all who are interested in the history of the South.

There is one more important point to be made about the use of the term "cognitive" in the title of this special issue. The term is used in a broad sense, encompassing a wide range of cognitive processes, from perception and attention to memory and reasoning. The term is used in a way that is consistent with the current understanding of cognitive processes in psychology and neuroscience.

"Ed, we've sure enjoyed your visit. Golly, it hardly seems like you've been here two weeks. Where did the time go?"

"Brother! How long were they here? About a month?"
